CipSoft announces new online game:
Fiction Fighters

Regensburg, August 1, 2008 – CipSoft, mostly known as the developer and publisher of the free MMORPG Tibia reveals the title of its new online game: Fiction Fighters.

Fiction Fighters is an interactive comic, where players jump into a parallel comic universe to solve world threatening quests, hang around with friends, (fiction-) fight against each other, explore or change numerous chapters of the world's history or even create their own stories – and comic strips. Comic strips are the core of Fiction Fighters. Every action and interaction is carried out in comic strips.

“Developing Fiction Fighters is great fun” admits Stephan Vogler, co-founder of CipSoft. “If you think in comic patterns all day long, meetings of the development team are likely to go crazy. I am happy that we've managed to bring a lot of this atmosphere into the game.”

The game will be a browser based multiplayer game with all comic panels rendered in 3D on server side. The teaser page (www.FictionFighters.com) offers the possibility to register for the official newsletter in order to get regular updates on the current status.
